

Brief Profile

Lay-Myint Yoshida is the Professor and Head of the Department of Pediatric Infectious Diseases, Institute of Tropical Medicine, Nagasaki University, Japan. He received his medical doctor degree, MBBS (MD) from University of Medical 1, Yangon, Myanmar in 1990 and was trained as a general physician at Yangon General Hospital. He obtained his PhD at Department of Infectious Diseases, Institute of Medical Science, University of Tokyo, Japan in 2004. His research area covers a broad range including viral and bacterial pathogens on pneumonia (Acute Respiratory Infection), vaccine preventable diseases, congenital infection, dengue, HIV drug resistance, etc. He has been working on a population based pediatric acute respiratory infection surveillance in Nha Trang, central Vietnam since 2006. He is also conducting a phase IV PCV reduced dosing schedule study funded by the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation in Nha Trang, Vietnam.

Department of Pediatric Infectious Diseases, Institute of Tropical Medicine, Nagasaki University (NEKKEN) homepage;

http://www.tm.nagasaki-u.ac.jp/pediatric/member/index\_en.html